

The War Today...

By DeWitt MacKenzie
AP War Analyst

DISCLOSURE that Hitler is sitting on a keg of human dynamite consisting of 12,000,000 slaves, brought to the Reich from occupied countries, raises an altogether grim picture of the situation which would exist if these unfortunates should try to exact retribution from the German people when the Fuehrer's military machine cracks—as crack it will in due course.

Unconditional surrender will bring the Hitlerites respite from further war. But what will it bring them from the millions who have suffered under the lash and have seen other millions of their colleagues die from privation? It's obvious that should these folk rise up for revenge, the best efforts of the Allies wouldn't be able to restrain them before terrible events had taken place.

We have known, of course, that Hitler was leading many of his war burdens onto the scarred backs of slave labor, both male and female. However, we've had no such details as are now given us by Taylor Henry, Associated Press correspondent, who is in Portugal awaiting repatriation after 13 months' internment by the Germans.

Forty per cent of Hitler's labor is foreign, and Russians and Poles head the list with 2,500,000 and 1,000,000, respectively. He must get money moments when he recalls the massacres and other atrocities he has perpetrated in Russia and Poland. He must get a chill when he remembers that out of the first 4,000,000 Russians captured by the Germans, only 1,500,000 survived the privations of his prison camps.

We know something of what the Nazi anti-Christ is thinking from a statement carried by the British Broadcasting Corp., which reports that all German nationals in Czechoslovakia have been issued guns and ammunition for self defense. The reason is that open resistance among the Czechoslovaks is growing, and says the B. B. C., the German authorities fully realize what will happen to them when the war reaches the frontiers of the little republic.

The civilians of many countries are living for the day when they can avenge themselves against the Nazi troops of occupation. But Hitler's greatest problem along this line must have to do with the Reich, where revenge may be taken not only against the soldiery but upon civilians. No wonder his murderous Gestapo chief, Himmler, has been given sweeping powers and has under his command a picked military force of 600,000.

MEANTIME, the great Allied vise continues to tighten on Hitlerdom, from the east and from the west. Moscow announces today that their troops in the north have

FLAMES THREATEN HOWARD AVE. HOME

Fire of undetermined origin early yesterday morning severely damaged the living room and furnishings at the home of Mrs. Marietta Bingham, 309 N. Howard ave.

Smoke from the fire awakened the family at 4:30 a. m. The flames, which had burned most of the contents of the room by the time it was discovered, were burning through a large front window. Firemen succeeded in confining the blaze to the one room.

U. S. Navy Airmen Leave Jap Warships Ablaze At Truk

The smashing victory of American air and naval might over the Japs in their Caroline islands fortress of Truk is recorded in this U. S. Navy photo. Caught by surprise, enemy ships were lying at anchor in the harbor. The attack has just started, but already two, and possibly three, enemy vessels are burning while the others frantically get up steam in an effort to evade the American bombs and torpedoes. Elen island is in the foreground, Moen in background. At least 23 Jap ships were sunk, including two cruisers, after receiving direct hits. Land installations were smashed also and 201 enemy planes destroyed.

Lisbon Methodist Church Burns With $50,000 Loss

LISBON, Feb. 28.—The 54-year-old Methodist church at E. Washington and S. Market streets was totally destroyed by fire in a spectacular blaze at 7:15 a. m. today. Loss on the building, almost entirely covered by insurance is estimated at $50,000.

A defective flue was blamed for the fire.

Although the church itself was lost, firemen, summoned by a passing truck driver at 7:15 a. m., were able to save the adjoining building.

HUGE CONVOY SAILS ATLANTIC

Contingent of U. S. Invasion Forces Makes Crossing Without Incident

(By Associated Press)
LONDON, Feb. 28.—U. S. forces massing in Britain for an invasion of western Europe have been strengthened by arrival of one of the largest contingents of American troops ever to cross the Atlantic in one convoy.

The crossing was made without a single attack by enemy submarines, but heavy storms caused some discomfort among the men.

The number of troops landed is, of course, a military secret, but all are highly trained and ready for combat. They included mechanized units and specialized troops of many types. All were fully equipped with the latest weapons.

In addition the convoy carried many planes of various types.

Immediately upon disembarking the troops were dispersed to American bases scattered from one end of the united kingdom to the other.

John A. Moroso, Associated Press correspondent who traveled with the convoy, said the trip was uneventful—a pleasure jaunt compared to a convoy crossing he made two years ago. He recalled that on that trip escorting craft delivered 11 depth charge attacks.

"Then," he said, "we slept in our clothes and wore lifebelts and helmets the last three days. On this trip we had no underwater contacts. We slept in pajamas and wore no lifebelts. Helmets were not even issued except to gun crews in exposed positions."

The early war tenseness of long watches has disappeared. There is a cockiness and eagerness among the sailors on the destroyers to come to grips with the enemy. The captain grips ship credits the Royal Navy and British air patrols and detection devices with keeping the U-boats under control in the eastern Atlantic.

Passengers Unhurt When Two Automobiles Crash

No one was injured in the head-on collision of cars driven by I. G. Harris, 907 E. State st., and Charles Lewis, 910 E. State st., on W. State st., near the Howard ave. intersection, Saturday.

Mrs. Lewis and their baby, passengers in one car, were taken to the Clinic for examination but were found to have been uninjured.

2 SALEM BOYS ARE KILLED IN TRAFFIC CRASH

Donald Beck, 16, Charles McGaffick, 18, Victims; Two Others Die

The deaths of two Salem youths in an accident at 11 p. m. Saturday on the Georgetown rd., the deaths of a Calcutta pedestrian near East Liverpool at midnight Saturday and the death of a Weirton, W. Va., steel truck driver Saturday afternoon brought the weekend traffic toll to four and the county's total of traffic fatalities for the year to eight.

The dead are:
Donald V. Beck, 16, son of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Beck, 416 S. Broadway.
Charles Richard McGaffick, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilford McGaffick, 551 Fourth st.
Teddy Roosevelt Givens, 36, steel worker, R. D. 2, East Liverpool.
Gerald Christy Crowley, 31, Weirton, W. Va.

The accident in which the Salem boys lost their lives and another youth, Art Sweetie, 15, of 985 N. Ellsworth ave., suffered severe lacerations of the face and head, happened at a slight curve in the Georgetown rd., six miles southwest of Salem.

The car, driven by Beck with McGaffick and Sweetie as passengers, was approaching Salem when it swerved suddenly, ran into an earthen embankment on the opposite side of the road. A farmer living in the vicinity heard the crash, summoned a neighbor and state patrolmen and located the car in about 20 minutes.

The Beck automobile, a 1936 Chevrolet coupe, was demolished in the crash.

Cecil Allison, 32, of R. D. 1, Lebanon, was the driver of a car which struck and killed Oliver, of R. D. 2, East Liverpool, as he walked along the Route 170 highway, about two miles north of East Liverpool at 12:35 a. m. Sunday.

The victim suffered a skull fracture and compound fractures of both lower legs. He was pronounced dead on arrival at the East Liverpool City hospital, State Patrolmen Bernard Hopkins said.

Funeral rites Wednesday

Funeral service for Charles McGaffick will be held at 2 p. m. Wednesday at the Arbaugh-Pearce funeral home in charge of Dr. Raymond.

COLLETT GOES ON TRIAL TODAY

60-Year Old McCoy Family Slayer Displays Nervousness As Case Opens

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON COURT HOUSE, Feb. 28.—James W. Collett, a slender, little, white-haired man of 60, was brought to trial today on a common pleas court today and put on trial for his life on an indictment accusing him of slaying the rich family of Elmer McCoy.

His head was bowed low as Sheriff W. H. Ichniower led him to the defense table in the center of the court, facing the bench of Judge H. M. Rankin. He wore his typical high plastic collar with a green shirt and black-and-white striped tie.

Collett, prominent Clinton county hog breeder, refused to speak to anyone, but relaxed slightly as the trial formally was opened.

James N. Linton of Columbus, chief defense counsel, said the defendant's wife and son would attend the trial, but they were not present when the old man was brought in.

Elmer McCoy, 59-year-old Fayette county hog breeder; his wife, Forrest, 64, and their daughter, Mildred, 22, were slain at their home "Oak View" last Thanksgiving Eve. McCoy was the brother of Mrs. Collett.

Says Confession Illegal

Shortly before court was convened, Linton told Judge Rankin the prosecution should not mention during examination of jurors a purported confession in which Collett was asserted to have shot McCoy to death, but knew nothing of the deaths of the women because "my mind went blank."

The confession was illegal, Linton insisted, in an informal statement to the court. Collett, he said, had asked for attorneys when he was taken before a magistrate for arraignment, but these were denied him. He demanded the confession not be mentioned until the court

WAVE From Warren Dies When Airplane Crashes

KANSAS CITY, Kas., Feb. 28.—An Ohio WAVE was one of 11 persons killed Saturday when a transport training plane crashed and burst into flames at the Olathe, Kas., naval air station. Five others were injured.

The Ohioan was Mary Kathryn Carr, 39, seaman first class, of 154 Potter, N. E. Warren.

The plane "pan-caked" from a height of 75 feet after faltering in a take-off. It was carrying personnel from the Naval Primary Training command headquarters at Fairfax airport, Kansas City, Kas.

Lieut. Wesley Kille Returns Home After 52 Combat Flights

First Lieut. Wesley Kille, who has completed 52 combat missions as pilot of a B-25 medium bomber, has arrived home from Italy for a visit with his wife, Helen, and little daughter, who live on W. Eighth st.

Lieut. Kille wears the ribbons for service in the European and American theaters, the Air Medal and nine oak leaf clusters and the tiny silver stars indicating his participation in two invasions, Sicily and Italy.

The Salem officers and his group have established a number of firsts—they were in the first raid on Rome last July in which 600 or more American planes took part; they were in the first bombing of Sofia, the Bulgarian capital; they were the first medium bombers in the Balkans and among the first bombers to be stationed in Italy, and they were in the first missions in Sardinia.

Some kind of a record has been set by the group which has lost only two men. Although they've had narrow escapes, his crew members

Wounded Veterans To Speak At Red Cross Rally Tonight

Two wounded veterans of World war II, one of them a Salem boy, will appear on the program when the Salem chapter of the American Red Cross launches its $32,000 War Fund drive at a public rally at 7:30 tonight in the Memorial building.

Campaign Chairman Albert R. Hanna, who will announce committee workers tonight, completed arrangements for the appearance on the program of Pfc. John Joseph Mirabito of Wakefield, Mass., a Marine, and Corp. Joseph Hrvatin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hrvatin, Jr., of 519 Aetna st.

Corp. Hrvatin, now convalescing at Fletcher General hospital at Cambridge, served with an infantry division in the invasion of North Africa and was engaged in virtually all of the Tunisian campaign. He was wounded on May 6, three days before the Tunisian campaign closed. A bullet from a German machine gun struck him in the hip.

Receiving treatment in four army hospitals, two of them overseas, Corp. Hrvatin arrived at Fletcher General hospital five weeks ago. Before entering service he was a potter and worked in the shipping department of the Salem China Co. Two other brothers are in the service, John, a mechanic in the Air Corps, and Anton, who is in the Navy.

Comes From Philadelphia

Pfc. Mirabito, who was wounded during the New Georgia campaign, now is on duty with the First Guard company at the Marine barracks, Philadelphia Navy Yard.

The son of Mrs. Mary C. Mirabito of Wakefield, Mass., the young Leatherneck suffered a stomach wound on July 4, 1943, when shrapnel from an enemy bomb exploded near him during the fighting for the New Georgia group.

Before returning to the United States last October, Pfc. Mirabito was stationed with the Marines at New Caledonia, New Hebrides, Guadalcanal, and the Russell Islands.

He enlisted in the Marine Corps in Boston Dec. 26, 1941. In civilian life he was employed as a grocery clerk. The Marine has a brother, Samuel Mirabito, in the U. S. Navy.

DECISION OF MEDICAL UNIT IS ANNOUNCED

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—The manpower shortage for the armed services which President Roosevelt has called "grave" must be made up from family men and others, a special Medical commission reported to the White House today, and not by lowering physical standards.

The commission was created at suggestion of Congress on the theory a relaxation of induction requirements, especially for limited service, might delay drafting of fathers and others without dependents. But it reported existing standards could not be reduced "without impairing the efficiency" of the armed services and no more limited service inductions are needed.

The report will be sent to Congress tomorrow. It follows publication Saturday of a memorandum President Roosevelt sent to manpower officials saying the nation's manpower pool has been dangerously depleted by liberal deferments. He said the deficit should be made up from those with occupational deferments, especially in the younger classes. A review of this group was ordered last night.

There are nearly 8,500,000 men in the groups the commission and the President urged be tapped—3,834,000 deferred for occupational reasons and 4,645,000 for dependency. Major General Lewis B. Hershey, Selective Service director, reported today.

Hershey placed total living registrants between 18 and 38 on Dec. 1, last, at 22,138,000 with 6,540,000 inducted, 2,430,000 enlisted, 3,357,000 disqualified after physical examination, 1,090,000 in process of classification, examination or induction, 152,000 deferred for other than occupational or dependency reasons, and 99,000 "unclassified and unknown."

Other Conclusions Shown

The commission proposed minor changes in physical standards, but General Hershey commented the net effect would be to increase the quality rather than quantity of inductees.

After saying efficiency would be impaired by lowering requirements, the commission, headed by the President's personal physician and surgeon general of the navy, Vice Admiral Ross T. McIntire, made these four additional conclusions, based on reports from the Army, Navy, Selective Service and Veterans administration:

1. The services have reached saturation for newly inducted men for limited service in northern France today in assaults combined with blows by American marauders and British medium bombers.

2. The services have reached saturation for newly inducted men for limited service in northern France today in assaults combined with blows by American marauders and British medium bombers.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—President Roosevelt today urged the enactment of legislation which would give returned war veterans exclusive opportunity to employment in such federal jobs as the President might designate.

Paratrooper Is Killed

EAST LIVERPOOL, Feb. 28.—This city added another gold star to its service flag yesterday after the War department advised Mrs. Jean Gulutz that her husband, Pvt. Thomas Gulutz, 28, a paratrooper, was killed in action Jan. 30 in Italy.

A steel worker prior to induction in October, 1942, he had served nine months in North Africa, Sicily and Italy.

Besides his widow, he leaves an 18-month-old son, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Guy Gulutz, four sisters and five brothers, two of whom are in the Navy.

Comes From Philadelphia

Pfc. Mirabito, who was wounded during the New Georgia campaign, now is on duty with the First Guard company at the Marine barracks, Philadelphia Navy Yard.

The son of Mrs. Mary C. Mirabito of Wakefield, Mass., the young Leatherneck suffered a stomach wound on July 4, 1943, when shrapnel from an enemy bomb exploded near him during the fighting for the New Georgia group.

Before returning to the United States last October, Pfc. Mirabito was stationed with the Marines at New Caledonia, New Hebrides, Guadalcanal, and the Russell Islands.

He enlisted in the Marine Corps in Boston Dec. 26, 1941. In civilian life he was employed as a grocery clerk. The Marine has a brother, Samuel Mirabito, in the U. S. Navy.

DECISION OF MEDICAL UNIT IS ANNOUNCED

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—The manpower shortage for the armed services which President Roosevelt has called "grave" must be made up from family men and others, a special Medical commission reported to the White House today, and not by lowering physical standards.

The commission was created at suggestion of Congress on the theory a relaxation of induction requirements, especially for limited service, might delay drafting of fathers and others without dependents. But it reported existing standards could not be reduced "without impairing the efficiency" of the armed services and no more limited service inductions are needed.

The report will be sent to Congress tomorrow. It follows publication Saturday of a memorandum President Roosevelt sent to manpower officials saying the nation's manpower pool has been dangerously depleted by liberal deferments. He said the deficit should be made up from those with occupational deferments, especially in the younger classes. A review of this group was ordered last night.

There are nearly 8,500,000 men in the groups the commission and the President urged be tapped—3,834,000 deferred for occupational reasons and 4,645,000 for dependency. Major General Lewis B. Hershey, Selective Service director, reported today.

Hershey placed total living registrants between 18 and 38 on Dec. 1, last, at 22,138,000 with 6,540,000 inducted, 2,430,000 enlisted, 3,357,000 disqualified after physical examination, 1,090,000 in process of classification, examination or induction, 152,000 deferred for other than occupational or dependency reasons, and 99,000 "unclassified and unknown."

Other Conclusions Shown

The commission proposed minor changes in physical standards, but General Hershey commented the net effect would be to increase the quality rather than quantity of inductees.

After saying efficiency would be impaired by lowering requirements, the commission, headed by the President's personal physician and surgeon general of the navy, Vice Admiral Ross T. McIntire, made these four additional conclusions, based on reports from the Army, Navy, Selective Service and Veterans administration:

1. The services have reached saturation for newly inducted men for limited service in northern France today in assaults combined with blows by American marauders and British medium bombers.

2. The services have reached saturation for newly inducted men for limited service in northern France today in assaults combined with blows by American marauders and British medium bombers.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—President Roosevelt today urged the enactment of legislation which would give returned war veterans exclusive opportunity to employment in such federal jobs as the President might designate.

Timely Checkups Avoid Big Auto Repair Bills

If all automobile owners would have their cars inspected by competent mechanics many parts could be saved and the expense would be much less than later on when the mechanic is required to take more time and use a new part. The steering connections and wheel bearings need regular tightening or excessive wear is certain to take place. Most of these parts can be tightened several times before wear makes necessary a replacement.

Matt Klein, who operates a specialized garage on Newgarden st., believes that anyone who will keep the wheels and other front end alignment parts tightened will save at least 25 per cent on tire wear and the savings in replacement parts if this work is neglected.

Another expense that can be avoided is the wear from unbalanced wheels. Matt Klein has a bearing that detects any bad wheel and by adding the correct weight to the rim at the right spot that bumps the road can be made to run true at all speeds.

Proof That Landing On Eniwetok Atoll Wasn't Easy

U. S. landing on Eniwetok atoll, westernmost of the Jap Marshall islands, wasn't as simple a matter as some might believe. Gallant Marines had to wade through the surf while facing Jap bullets from the island. Snipers accounted for several of the Marines as the photo at bottom shows. A dead Marine, just killed, lies beside one of his buddies on the beach. The censor has obliterated the victim's face. Note men crouched to escape sniper fire.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—A special medical commission reported to the White House today that family men and others must make up the shortage of military manpower and that physical standards must not be lowered.

The report of the Congress-appointed panel follows President Roosevelt's memorandum — made public Saturday — that the nation's manpower pool has been "dangerously depleted" by liberal deferments and that the deficit should be made up with those holding occupational deferments, especially in the younger age groups.

The commission is headed by the President's personal physician, Vice Admiral Ross T. McIntire, surgeon general of the Navy.

TAXES

The house ways and means committee started work in earnest today to simplify tax legislation so that after March 15, settling up with the Treasury won't be such a complicated job. According to Chairman Doughton (D-NC), new legislation may provide for lumping of the victory, normal and surtaxes into one levy and permit most taxpayers to settle their entire indebtedness through the amount withheld by their employers.

Sen. Russell (D-Ga.) has proposed an appropriation bill amendment which would prevent fund transfers to agencies a year or more old which were not authorized by Congress and says of it: "I hope it wipes out the fair employment practices committee." The FEPC was created by executive order to prevent racial discrimination among war workers. Russell says his overall objective is to "stop the executive department from legislating."

THE LITTLE DOG BARKED by ANNE ROWE

CHAPTER THIRTY-FIVE

My substantial meal had done me a world of good, and my talk with Orne Paulsen had helped even more. I felt positively elated as I walked back to the inn. Proud of my successful sleuthing. I was impatient to hear what Inspector Pettengill would say to Paulsen's amendment of his last night's statement.

I'd better write all he'd said down in addition to Burns Loring's story which I had promised the Inspector and went to the desk for my key.

Just as the clerk was handing it to me I heard Sondra's voice behind me, saying in her most affected Southern drawl: "Mrs. Turner, honey—may I have a little visit with you?"

Sondra looked beautiful—all in her usual white, a woolly knitted dress this time—but I didn't like her expression. She was smiling with her lips only. Her eyes were serious, almost haunted, and showed she had come for a purpose—to find out more about the investigation, or to take me to task for my forceful speech to her "Honey-boy" Linwood.

I had no wish to discuss either, but I hid my dismay as best I could and said: "Certainly. Let's go upstairs." Presently we were sitting in my room, each looking at the other warily.

"I—I came to tell you how desperately sorry I am about your little dog," Sondra opened the conversation.

"Thank you," I said conventionally.

"And that dreadful attack on Linda! Your nerves must be all shot to pieces. I'm sure I would have died in your place!" The words dripped affection. "I almost fainted when that policeman came and dragged us all over here, for questioning. The very idea there might have been another murder was making me ill. And you, being so brave and—"

Her voice trailed off—she'd probably learned the trick from Linwood—and she glanced at me in a most pleading manner.

I returned the glance. Then Sondra heaved a sigh and said plaintively: "Why don't you help me, honey? You know I'm here to—"

—to talk of last night. The cabin on the cove shore—you know?"

So Sondra had seen me. I hadn't been sure. Neither she nor Linwood had given a sign.

"Yes? What about the cabin on the cove shore?" I asked coolly.

She made a helpless gesture. "Oh—nothing. I reckon it was fate. No one ever caught on to it before."

My—our—using it. And you found us right away."

"Without trying," I assured her. Sondra sighed again. "That makes it all the more—all the more—"

"Preordained?" I helped her out. She nodded. "Yes. I reckon, that's what I mean. Had you been there long when I heard you—go away?"

"Long enough to learn that you intend marrying Burns Loring—if you can—to please the successor you hope to give him," I told her bluntly.

"And did you—recognize the other voice?"

So that was it. Linwood, knowing he had talked in whispers, had sent Sondra to find out if I'd recognized his identity.

"Uh-huh, I did," I told her. "But even if I hadn't, Inspector Pettengill took the bottle and the glasses you'd used, for fingerprinting. I'm sure he found your prints on them, and Tom Linwood's and that he asked your boy friend to the police cottage because of that. Or—"

—didn't you know he's being questioned?"

Sondra sat very still for quite a long moment, her yellow eyes staring at nothing.

"You shouldn't have run to the police with your discovery, honey," she said at last huskily.

"Wouldn't you have done so in my place?" I challenged.

She shook her head. "I—don't think so. I don't like to tell things, and scarcely ever tell all."

After a long pause, Sondra said: "I came to tell you—Tom doesn't know it was you, on the porch. He thinks it was the Inspector. And I let him, even if I'd seen it was you, through a slit of the shutters."

"You didn't tell Linwood?" My common sense refused to believe the statement.

"Cross my heart I didn't, honey." Sondra's slender fingers drew a cross on the front of her dress. "I felt it would be better not to. It would have made him so frantic, knowing you'd found him out. He's getting pretty scared as it is—"

"Scared of me?" I asked incredulously.

"Yes," she nodded. "He didn't realize at first that you were working with the police. And besides, when things start coming out, you never know how far they'll go and—"

—you see, I've not told Tom all about Burns. I like Burns very much. Only, he doesn't seem to want me any longer—and I've told him about Tom. I thought I ought to. And if Tom finds it out he—I think he'd kill me—"

I wasn't interested in the twists of Sondra's triangular situation. I wanted to hear more about Linwood in connection with old Mack's murder. And so I interrupted her rudely and asked: "Why does Linwood dislike me so much? I've never done him any harm."

"Oh, yes, you have, honey," she contradicted. "You hurt his vanity the very first time you met. He told me. At lunch it was, I believe. And Tom doesn't like to be found out, especially by a woman. He didn't really mean to do very much to your play. Only enough to make the crowd here—Alden and Vickery and Phil Parrish's stepmother—feel he was on their side."

"A few thousand dollars' worth on their side?" I asked.

"I don't know how much they paid him. But—Tom always needs money, that's why he did it. A director doesn't make so very much unless he owns a piece of the show," she explained unabashed. "You told him you wouldn't let him direct your play on Broadway, but you didn't mean it, did you? You will let him, if I beg you very much? And you'll let me play in it? It's so hard for me to find a good part."

"I have no reason, and no intention, to use my veto power in your case. If McVane likes you, you're all set," I assured her.

Sondra smiled. "You're so sweet, honey, thank you!" and went right on, with abashed eyes: "And you will keep Tom also, won't you? He'll apologize, I promise. I'll make him."

She was making it pretty hard for me, but—

"I'm sorry," I told her firmly. "That's something I can't promise."

Her eyes seemed to grow and turn black—were suddenly all pupil.

"I reckon you can't, honey," she conceded, almost inaudibly. "Poor Tom! Now he'll have nothing. He had a row with the other side too. And the way things—aren't—between Burns and me—I'm frightened. Terribly frightened. Perhaps I should go and talk to the police. But it isn't my way. Last night when he lied for me—Orne, I mean—I thought everything would be all right. That I was—safe, if I kept quiet. But I've thought a lot, and found out a lot, since coming here. And after you've refused to give Tom another chance I'm a fool to warn you—But then, I am a fool—"

Sondra got up and walked to the door, slowly. "You're too friendly with the police, honey. Getting too deep into this—this murder thing. So deep—you're in danger! Please don't tell anyone I've been here. Or I'll be in danger too."

It was the most senseless request imaginable.

"A little late in the day for making a deep secret of your visit—when the desk clerk knows all about it," I pointed out dryly.

Sondra stopped, close to the door. "On—that's true! I'd forgotten. Let me think." And after a lengthy pause advised me: "Tell everyone then—everyone—that I have been here. And asked you a great many questions about—what the police have found out. Will you do that?"

"Gladly. It's more or less the truth, isn't it?" I queried ironically.

"Yes. More or less," she acknowledged. "Thank you, honey. And don't forget. You are in danger."

Then she was gone, and I was staring at the door she had closed behind her. Soon I sat at my typewriter to put down every sentence she'd said for the Inspector, working backwards from there, through my talk with Paulsen and Ione Weiland's strange confession of gratitude for my denunciation of her husband, also Burns Loring's disclosures.

Let's All Back the Attack—Buy More War Bonds

For the Great American HELLDIVER

Urgent and secret was the request to Chrysler Corporation to get ready to build these vital wing sections for the newest, biggest and fastest of Navy dive bombers—the great Helldiver.

Secretly designed to carry heavy loads at fast diving speeds, each wing section contained several thousand parts.

Engineers, tool designers, production experts of Chrysler Corporation went promptly to work. The drawings were made; tools and fixtures designed and installed for the day when the final "Go Ahead" signal would come.

The Go Ahead came in a hurry. Since April '43 these great Helldiver wing sections have moved down their guarded production lines much as automobiles did in former years, their thousands of precision parts assembled, and the wing sections completed.

The Helldivers have recently been fully tested and proven in South Pacific battle; reports of their action fulfill the strong claims made for them; and their wings, we are proud to say, carry their double bomb loads at fast diving speeds.

These Helldiver wing sections are but one of many war-production assignments in which Chrysler Corporation applies its experience and capacity in precision engineering and quantity manufacturing.

later collapsed in a heart attack induced by excitement.

The church, furnishings, wood ceiling, pews and floor were entirely burned, leaving only the walls standing. Firemen expect the brick sides to fall when they have cooled and have kept a force at the site to prevent accidents while workmen erect barricades around the area. Heavy wood beams and rafters in the upper part of the church were still smoking at noon.

Started in 1897, the church was dedicated in 1899 with Rev. W. W. Kellogg as pastor. Ten years ago building and furnishings were remodeled and a new organ installed. Rev. C. L. Cope is pastor of the parish.

Telephone lines which were damaged in the fire are still out of commission in that end of town, partially disrupting service.

Confess Slaying

CLEVELAND, Feb. 28.—Detective Lieutenant Martin P. Cooney reported today a 16-year-old youth with a previous police record had signed a statement confessing complicity in the slaying "just for fun" of William Jensen, 56, two days ago.

Cooney identified the youth as Edward Svagerko of Cleveland and said his statement implicating a 23-year-old man who also is held by police, declared, "we did it just for fun. The old man asked for trouble and we gave it to him."

Jensen, a janitor, was beaten to death with an iron bar late Saturday as he stood in a doorway of an East Side residence.

Mine Still Closed

BELLAIRE, Feb. 28.—A work stoppage at the Poughatan coal mine—one of Ohio's largest shafts—entered its fifth day after employees voted not to return to work.

The pit has been idle since last Wednesday when the company to intercede in a disagreement between a foreman and a miner.

formally had ruled upon its competency.

John B. Hill, Fayette county prosecutor, said until the court ruled upon competency of the confession he had nothing to say.

Judge Rankin commented the court had nothing on which to pass, since no question had been raised before a jury.

The court room, which seated only 75 persons, was little more than half-filled as Collett was brought in, but spectators and members of a special venire of 75 drawn for the jury lined up in the corridor outside.

Displays Nervousness

Collett, who has lost his former jaunty and became increasingly nervous, slept well last night, jailers reported.

Linton, carrying out a previous promise, said he wanted the record to show the defense was proceeding with the trial under protest. He asserted Collett was arrested last Nov. 30 and kept in custody until Dec. 4 without a preliminary hearing or being allowed to see friends, relatives or attorneys.

Judge Rankin refused Saturday Linton's motion for a postponement until the state furnished certain records. Linton said then he would proceed only under protest.

Report to the Nation:

When the 4th War Loan Ended— Our Fighting Men Kept Firing!

News that the 4th War Loan goal of $14,000,000,000 has been reached and passed will cheer American boys from Italy to the Marshalls. But they will hear the news not only over sputtering radios but over the din of battle.

For the war still goes on with ever mounting fury. And that means that our War Bond buying must go on unabated, too.

To the millions who bought extra War Bonds in this drive, all America gives thanks.

To the 5,000,000 and more volunteer workers who contributed their time and abilities to help make the drive a success, your Government and your fighting men give thanks.

To the thousands of patriotic newspapers, magazines, radio stations and networks, members of the motion picture industry, the outdoor industry, advertisers and agencies, retail stores, banks, post offices, credit unions, building and loan associations, labor unions, fraternal organizations and farm credit associations, the Nation gives thanks.

Once again Americans have proved their determination to "back the attack" to the full.

But the attack goes on

Look at Italy. When the 4th War Loan drive ended at midnight February 15, the drive on Rome was still going on. American boys were still crouching in water-filled foxholes—clinging with bitter and bloody tenacity to beachhead the Germans were equally determined to take back. Thus on the same midnight that witnessed the end of the 4th War Loan drive, the hands of the clock met like shears to snip the lives of scores of American boys engaged in the March on Rome. And the fight goes on.

Look at Japan. At the same hour that saw the end of the 4th War Loan, the "March of Death" that shocked all America to a realization of Jap brutality to American prisoners of war—that march was still going on.

To liberate those heroes of Bataan and Corregidor before it is "too late," other American boys stormed and took the Marshalls on the road to Tokyo.

But that March to Tokyo—still 2,000 miles away—that march goes on.

And we on the home front

—can we afford to stop now that the 4th War Loan is history, while our all-important job of supplying and financing this costliest war of all time still goes on? We have won a home front battle here, yes.

But just as our boys continue even more vigorously once they have established a beachhead, so we must continue to build on the success we have already achieved.

Our job goes on

The Bonds we bought last week and the week before are today's exploding bombs and shells, and spent bullets can never be used again. We must provide for tomorrow, too. The need for new guns, planes, ships and tanks still goes on.

For the war still goes on with ever mounting fury. So while all of those on the home front who have bought Bonds and have worked so hard to make the 4th War Loan drive a success have earned the Nation's thanks, none of us can afford to forget that our home front job, including Bond buying, also still goes on!

Leaders Change Places As Women's Bowling Meet Advances

SPORT CHATTER

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.
NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—When Paul Brown, Ohio State grid coach, goes into the Navy, he will be given the privilege of naming his own successor, probably one of his assistants. That's quite a change from the old Ohio system of firing the coach and everybody who was on speaking terms with him. Lieut. Jim Burchard, former New York sport scribe, hopes to bring the winners of the recent Allied service boxing tournament on a tour to the United States. The Dodgers insist those new shiny uniforms for night games shouldn't be called "jockey" suits—both the manufacturer and Judge Landis would object. Nevertheless, the Bums likely will get a lot of "riding" when they wear them.

BRAVES' PILOT

Bob Coleman for seven years a member of the Boston Braves coaching staff elevated to manager, replacing Casey Stengel.

Did you ever know that Battling Nelson wasn't a nickname? The full name is Oscar Matthew Battling Nelson. Or that Ford Frick, National League president, once was a college prof. (He looks like one) and taught journalism to Frank Frawley, the A. P.'s Los Angeles sports expert?

Seeded teams sometimes win tournaments but more often they don't—and that is just about the only way you can look at the picture over at Youngstown South's field house this week when the sectional district basketball tourney gets underway tomorrow night. With 27 Class A teams entered.

Four teams are seeded this year. Youngstown South, Canton's Lehigh, and Timken, and the Warren Presidents. Of the four Youngstown South is probably the most likely to be defeated in early competition. It boasts a good record but not one that rates it among the other three top-notchers.

Canton's powerful delegates, Lehigh and Timken, rate highest of all. Timken has won 16 of 18 games and Lehigh 13 of 18. However, the Lehigh-Polar Bears tossed a wrench into ratings Friday night by knocking Timken over 47-38 in their second clash of the year. Timken had defeated Lehigh by two points in the initial meeting.

Warren is powerful aggregation and should go through their bracket to the last game with little trouble. There they will meet—if all goes as expected—Canton Timken, in what would be one of the hottest games of the tournament. The two teams met once this year—one Warren's floor—and Altimken won out by one point, 37-36.

OHIO SWIM CROWN GOES TO FINDLAY

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS, Feb. 28.—The handsome trophy, symbolic of the Ohio High school swimming championship, belongs today to Findlay's little band of water experts.

Capitalizing on strength in the free style events, the Findlay paddlers and splash artists piled up 23 points in the annual state meet at Ohio State university natatorium here Saturday to finish in first place by the relatively safe margin of six points. In winning the title, Findlay succeeded Fremont Ross, which finally wound up in fourth place with 16 points.

Lakewood and Canton McKinley gathered in 17 points each to finish in a tie for second and third places but Lakewood carried home the runner-up trophy by winning a coin toss.

Individual honors in the meet went to Ralph Knight of Massillon, who won both the 100-yard backstroke and the 100-meter free style. Knight set the only new record when he turned in a time of 1:01.8 for the backstroke. The old record of 1:03 was set by Junta of Fremont Ross in 1941.

Findlay scored in four of the eight events on the program but 20 of its points were accumulated in the free style races.

Liverpool Beats Alliance 58-21; Coach Enters Navy

East Liverpool High cagers made it 14 out of 18 games for the season when they defeated Alliance 58-21 on the Potlatch floor Saturday night.

The game ended, the five-year tenure of Bill Laughlin, former W. & J. star, as the Potlatch coach as he left today for Hollywood, Fla. to report to the Navy. He has been commissioned an ensign.

East Liverpool's reserves completed their second successive unbeaten season by winning from Alliance's second-stringers, 58-27.

have been injured only a few times—a fact which the pilot claims is due to team work and luck.

In Many Important Raids
Veterans of North African and Sicilian action, Lieut. Kille and his men have taken part in raids on Rome, Sofia, Perugia, Italy, Athens in Greece, Naples, Sardinia, and Benevento, Italy. His experiences have been nothing spectacular, he says, explaining that in bomber flying the spectacular is rare.

Enlisting March 29, 1942, as an air cadet, Kille took pre-flight training at Maxwell field, Ala., primary flight training at Tuskegee, Ala., and advanced work at Moody field, Ga., graduating from Moody field Feb. 23, 1943. He received operational training at Columbus, S. C., before going overseas last May 14.

His first overseas post was in Tunis, North Africa, and then on Oct. 5 he was transferred to Tarranto, Italy. His last station in Italy was at Foggia, an advanced base on the Adriatic coast.

His last flight on Jan. 4 was over Perugia, Italy, his 52nd combat mission. Kille explained that flyers are required to complete only 50 combat missions before receiving that long-awaited leave home, but, if they are needed, they make others.

On one occasion, Lieut. Kille recalls his plane was one of a formation on a bombing run to Athens when his group was jumped by 20 ME-109's and in an hour-long running battle, two of the three American planes were lost. Kille's plane was not badly damaged, except for numerous holes and battle scars.

On another run, his plane returned with 50 or 60 holes and a gaping hole in a wing caused by an 8mm shell which tore through it, but failed to explode. The bombardier was the only casualty and he was not hurt seriously.

In a raid on Milo Trepani in Sicily, Lieut. Kille's plane was on the tail end of a formation. Failure of the hydraulic system put the turret and tail guns out of commission, leaving the ship wide open to attack. When a Nazi fighter appeared, the crew figured their luck and pretty well ran out, but to their amazement the Nazi passed them by, without firing, content merely to wave at them. The Americans were so startled that they waved back. Before the Nazi had time to change his mind, if he intended to, a P-40 appeared and ran him out of sight. Kille said the men afterward figured the Nazi must have been out of ammunition.

His co-pilot narrowly missed death on a raid on Sofia, Kille recalls. Wearing a metal helmet, instead of his usual pilot's headgear, he bent down to inspect the hydraulic system at the instant a piece of flak tore through the compartment. The missile, bouncing off the protecting headgear, did no damage.

Cited For Bombing Bridge
Lieut. Kille's crew was one of three in formation which were reviewed by King George of England on a visit last June to Tunis and his crew members were cited for their successful bombing of an important bridge at Benevento, Italy. The bridge, which a number of other planes had gone over and missed, was an important objective impeding the Italian invasion at a time when Americans were trying to consolidate their beachhead landings. Kille's crew hit the target on their first try.

Kille says the men spend most of their time between missions sleeping, reading their mail which they never seem to get enough of, or writing home. They have seen several movies at Foggia, and in Tunis they had entertainments by Bob Hope and his group of radio and film stars and by Joe E. Brown.

The pilot spent two weeks in December on the Isle of Capri on a rest after the completion of 50 missions.

Enroute home he had to wait a month in Casablanca, North Africa, for a boat to bring him back to the States. He will report to Atlantic City to await a new assignment and will remain in the United States for at least six months before returning to combat flying.

DRAFT DECISION

the service are no longer fit for general service.

"2. It is evident that the urgent and increasing need of the services today is for men for general service and that this need will progressively increase until the war is successfully concluded.

"3. It is apparent that these needs can not be met by lowering the physical requirements for admission to the armed forces or by increasing the induction of men for limited service.

"4. In view of the needs of the armed services for men qualified for general service, which needs can not be fully met from the pool of men now on hand in class I-A plus the annual increment of men coming of military age, it is apparent that the manpower required for the prosecution of the war can not be obtained except by induction of men living with their families and recourse to all other available sources."

Others on the commission besides Admiral McIntire were Major General Norman T. Kirk, surgeon general of the army; Dr. Frank H. Lahey, Lahey clinic, Boston; Dr. Edward A. Strecker, professor of psychiatry, University of Pennsylvania, and Dr. Alan C. Woods, Johns Hopkins hospital, Baltimore.

Dental Decay Someday May Be Thing of Past

(By United Press)

CHICAGO—Dr. John Oppie McCall, New York, predicts in an article in the American Dental Association "Journal" that artificial teeth and other dental replacements may be a thing of the past in the world of tomorrow.

"In approaching the consideration of dentistry of the future, thought naturally turns to prevention of disease as the desirable nucleus of such practice," Dr. McCall, director of the Guggenheim dental clinic, New York, writes. "I mean true prevention, not merely early correction of dental caries (decay)."

A combination of fluoride supplement and a balanced diet are the probable answers to healthy teeth, he states.

"Investigation as to the effect of ingestion of fluorides on the dental tissue has given strong hope that the incidence of dental caries can be reduced appreciably," Dr. McCall writes.

"Possibly the most satisfactory answer to the problem from the practical standpoint will be a combination of a fluoride supplement and a balanced dietary."

Marine From Ohio Bags 14 Jap Zeros In Pacific Fighting

BOUGAINVILLE — (Delayed.) — When Marine Capt. Harold L. Spears of R. D. 2, Ironton, O., bagged two Zeros over Rabaul, bringing his score to 14, he joined the ranks of leading Marine aces in action in the South Pacific.

Eight days ago he registered his 11th and 12th victories, also Zeros, over the New Britain base.

Capt. Spears has tallied 19 of his victims in the last 17 days over Rabaul. Six of them fell within five days.

A flying mate of the 24-year-old flier, First Lt. Robert A. Hanson of Newtonville, Mass., 25-plane ace, recently was reported missing in action.

Captain Spears' record is topped by another squadron mate, Capt. Donald N. Aldrich of Chicago, Ill., who has 17 Jap planes.

All are members of the Fighting Corsairs, Marine fighter squadron, which has registered more than 100 enemy planes downed.

While escorting torpedo and dive bombers on a Rabaul raid, Capt. Spears sighted three Zeros 5,000 feet below him just as the bombers began their runs.

Settling the formation, he leveled off slightly above the Zaps, poured a burst into one, and set him afire.

"I then spotted two Zeros mixing it up with four Corsairs," he related. "I swung over to the fight. Getting on the tail of a Jap, I began peppering him with the lead."

"He pulled straight up—I was still with him, firing—and stalled out at the top of his climb."

As the Jap dove straight down, Capt. Spears followed, firing in "short bursts." When the Marine flier pulled out at 600 feet over New Britain, the Zero plunged straight into the jungle.

Later in the scrap, the Corsair pilot damaged another Zero, but did not make the kill.

The Marine ace registered his 11th and 12th victories similarly on Jan. 26.

Ex-Ohio University Griddler
While escorting torpedo and dive bombers over Rabaul, Capt. Spears spotted two Zeros below him at 4,000 feet. Diving on the rear-most one, he sent him down in flames with a long burst.

Shortly afterwards, a Zero raced out of a cloud, and turned his belly temptingly toward him.

As shots punctured the Zero's belly, it went into a roll, smoking. A few seconds later it flamed. Capt. Spears followed the Jap down until he crashed.

The flier chalked up his first four Zeros in July and August engagements last year while flying from the newly-won air strip at Munda.

A former football star at Ohio university, Athens, O., Capt. Spears is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanton Davis of the Ironton address. His wife, Mary, lives at 90 N. 31st st., Newark, O.

FBI Ends Spree

Lavish spending spree of two young men in resplendent Army uniforms capped by a Washington party attended by many prominent came to an end when the FBI walked in and took the two hosts away after identifying them as a pair of long-term military prisoners who escaped from Fort Knox, Ky. The two accused, Pvt. E. R. Malone, Jr., of Brooklyn, (top), who posed as "Capt. J. E. Daley," and Douglas R. Allred of Portland, Ore., who posed as Maj. Allen Ward, are shown above. They had rented a $33-a-day suite in a hotel, having opened fat bank accounts with worthless checks.

The War Today

driven to within 15 miles of the strategic rail center of Pskov, which has been one of the important German bases, and have captured more than 200 towns and villages. A little further south the Reds are only about two score miles from the Latvian frontier. Down in the Dnieper bend the Muscovites reported progress in the fierce battle.

The western arm of the Vio also is moving steadily toward the day of the great invasion of France. London reports that Uncle Sam has just landed in Britain one of the largest contingents of Yankee troops to cross the Atlantic. They are highly trained, fully equipped, ready for combat.

While the great land army continues to grow in England, American-British air forces take the Reich in devastating preparation for the invasion. Last week the Anglo-American air forces won 13 huge raids, raised havoc with Hitler's warplane production, and is unofficially figured in London that a large percentage of the manufacturing capacity has been wiped out. At the same time the Allies destroyed at least 644 German fighter planes, and this is believed to have cut the Nazis' available aircraft close to the point where they must soon depend largely on the output from the battered factories.

That makes Der Fuehrer's prospects in the air pretty slim. And air power is vital to his defense against invasion.
